The three youth portrayed in Growing Up with Television are students at an alternative middle school in New York City in the early 1990s. Fisherkeller spent more than two months as an ethnographer at the school, surveying fifty students about their general media habits, including frequency of and motivation for watching television. She chose six students as focal participants, with whom she Growing Up With Television by JoEllen Fisherkeller ... Fisherkeller examines how youth are attracted to TV programs and persona that help them work through personal and social dilemmas. TV stories teach them about conflicts of gender, race and class that parallel the lessons they learn from real life and the system of television show them how image creation is a real means of "making it" in an image-conscious society.
